Our Team

Fred Weston now operates successfully as a second-generation company, being effectively guided by our current managing director Peter Weston along with his partner and commercial director, Mike Pearson who have over thirty years experience in electrical contracting and in particular with industrial and commercial contracts.

We directly employ all our staff from qualified electricians to first-year apprentices and office-based staff. Fred Weston is fully committed to training and development and acknowledge that our staff are a key factor to our success.

In testament to this a Fred Weston apprentice was a finalist in the prestigious MK Apprentice of the Year Awards 2007.

Our apprenticeships study NVQ electrical engineering qualifications at local colleges of further education. All employees follow the Joint Industry Board guidelines and as an organisation we are audited annually by NICEIC.

Peter J. Weston, Managing Director

My career began as an apprentice electrician working alongside my father, where I gained valuable knowledge for operating a successful electrical contracting business. Taking the role of Managing Director in 1989, my aim is to continue to build on our success and hopefully pass the family business onto the next generation of Westons.

Mike Pearson, Commercial Director

My career as an apprentice electrician began in 1965 working for an electrical contractors in Wrexham. Once qualified I spent many years working in various industries with promotion to contracts manager and business partner. Following a move into teaching at a Technical College in Papua New Guinea, I returned to the UK to join Fred Weston in 1990 and gained promotion to the Commercial Director.
